Blast Of Oil Hits Woman; Death Likely

Exploding Kerosene Can Causes Grave Burns

Mrs. Emil Anderson, 43, 908 Irving avenue, was burned, probably fatally, early today when she attempted to pour kerosene on a fire in her kitchen stove and the kerosene can which she was holding suddenly exploded. She was reported to be in very critical condition in St. Mary's hospital.

Arising a little later than usual, Mrs. Anderson started a fire in the stove and in an attempt to make the fire burn better obtained a can of kerosene. She held the can over the open flame and started to pour the kerosene, which as soon as it struck the flames suddenly flared back in gas formation which exploded the can and burned her from head to foot.

Rushed to Hospital

Screaming in agony she ran to the yard and the fire department, called just after the explosion, found her there. They immediately applied tannic acid in an attempt to lessen the effect of the burns and the woman was rushed to the hospital.

At the hospital it was found that almost her entire body had been burned. Most of the burns were of the serious third degree nature and the remainder first and second degree. Her recovery was very doubtful.

House Damaged Little

The house was damaged very little, the damage amounting to not more than $100, according to Fire Chief C. E. Foster. He stated that the woman was apparently burned principally by the sudden flareback from the stove and that the later blaze in the house did not spread far although the intensity of the flareback and explosion blistered the walls of the room.

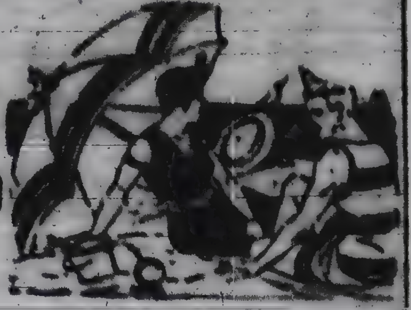
SEASIDE



MAN IS KILLED BY TRAIN AT SEASIDE

At 11:20 o'clock Sunday night an S. P. & S. train backed over a stranger at the Seaside depot, killing him instantly.

Letters found in the stranger's pocket indicated that he was C. H. Aylesworth of Boardman, Oregon.

There were no eye witnesses to the accident but several men were on the scene a few moments later and it was found that the body had been carried about 300 feet after being struck by the train. J. A. McIntire, deputy coroner, was summoned, and he had considerable difficulty in extracting the man's body from under the train, as the legs were wrapped into one of the springs of the trucks.

The train had stopped to let off its passengers and then had proceeded to back up to leave some of the cars on the siding. A brakeman upon uncoupling the sidetracked cars discovered the body beneath the third car from the rear of the train.

Both legs were cut off at the hips but aside from two cuts on the forehead and one on the chin the head and body were not badly mangled.

Among the effects found in the stranger's pockets was a telegram addressed to Junction City, directing the man to come to work for the Grant-Smith-Porter Company near Seaside. The letters found gave evidence that Aylesworth was a married man having a family living near Boardman.

Yesterday morning, Deputy Coroner McIntire took the body to Pohl's undertaking parlor in Astoria from where an effort was made to locate the relatives. Last evening Coroner Pohl received a telegram from W. G. Aylesworth at Junction City, stating that he was coming to Astoria and the remains should be held for his orders.

A baggage check found established the fact that the unfortunate man was a passenger on the train that caused his death.

Elderly sisters found dead

Two elderly sisters found deceased in their Astoria apartment Thursday died of natural causes, police said.

Anna and Elsie Anderson appeared to have been dead for several days — before the cold spell hit the North Coast — when police entered their apartment at 1786 Jerome Ave. Thursday evening, said Cmdr. Alan Oja of the Astoria Police Department.

Police did not know the Andersons' ages because officers couldn't find any personal identification listing their birth dates, Oja said. An officer who found the women said they appeared to be in their 80s.

Police went to the apartment after the Andersons' landlord reported he had not seen the sisters in several days and that he could hear their cat or cats crying, Oja said. Based on newspapers found in the apartment, police deduced that the sisters may have died around Jan. 23.

The fact that the sisters died around the same time is uncommon, but not that uncommon, considering that they were elderly and probably very close to one another, Oja said.

The TWENTY-THIRD PSALM

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.....

COMMITTED SUICIDE

Peter Brach, one of the best known and most popular men in Astoria, committed suicide yesterday by blowing out his brains. It is thought he was temporarily insane when he committed the rash act. Death was instantaneous.

Some time ago Mr. Brach failed in business, losing both the Resort and his East Astoria place of business. He was retained as manager of the East Astoria saloon. Shortly before noon yesterday Mrs. Brach heard the report of a pistol, and, upon investigating, found the body of her husband in a small room back of the saloon lying in a pool of blood. Brach had used a 38-calibre Smith & Wesson revolver, an had shot himself in the right temple, the ball coming almost through the skull on the other side of the head.

The news of Mr. Brach's death was a great surprise, as he was always considered one of the jolliest men in the city. He was undoubtedly insane when he shot himself, as it is said he brooded considerably over his reverces in business.

Coroner Pohl held an inquest on the dead man's body yesterday, and the jury returned a verdict in accordance with the facts as above stated.

Mr. Brach was born in Denmark about forty years ago, and came to Astoria when he was 21 years of age, since which time he has resided here. He was engaged in fishing for the first six years, then going into the retail liquor business. He was quite successful and made considerable money. While not what might be termed a spendthrift, he nevertheless was very liberal, and it is said that assisting others helped largely to bring financial disaster upon him. He was a member of four different secret societies—the Elks, the Odd Fellows, the Sons of Hermann and the Scandinavian Benevolent Society. All four lodges will take part in the funeral services. Mr. Brach leaves a wife and two sons, aged 4 and 8 years respectively. The funeral will be held on Monday.

For the past three or four years "Pete Brach" has been a much-used expression. "Pete Brach" did this, or "Pete Brach" did that, and "Go tell your troubles to Pete Brach," were all standing jokes. Peter was one of the biggest "joshers" in the city, and his many friends could hardly realise that he had killed himself. His family will receive quite an insurance from the societies to which he belonged.

Grace Episcopal church was crowded yesterday afternoon with the members of the Masonic order, Pioneer Society, Harbor No. 22 Pilot's Association, and the hundreds of friends of the late Captain Hiram Brown, who desired to show their respect for an honored citizen and faithful friend at the last sad rites of the funeral service. The chancel and platform where the casket stood were decorated with a profusion of flowers. The grand and simple service of the church was read by Rector Short. A special choir, composed of Messrs. H. C. Smith, W. H. Barker, Mrs. B. Van Dusen and Mrs. C. J. Trenchard, rendered music appropriate to the occasion. The hymn, "Art Thou Weary," was particularly effective. The services at Greenwood were conducted by the Masons, whose beautiful ritual rivals all others. Only the immediate family and members of Temple lodge, No. 7, A. F. and A. M., were present at the grave. During the funeral the circuit court adjourned, the flags on the court house and other buildings were placed at half-mast, while the harbor tugs and the incoming British ship Dovenby Hall also dropped their flags.

The TWENTY-THIRD PSALM

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.....

A Heartfelt Thanks

From the George Baker family and Crystal and Pat, to all the people who had us in their hearts, thoughts and prayers this past week, well the first twenty days of January. I don't know if all those hearts, thoughts and prayers help or not, but I know I wouldn't want to go through this without you.

Two days after I got what a police officer called, the worst possible news, I was trying to make a trail through Bob's and my junk stacked in the garage. I heard voices as two 10 or 11 year old boys came into view on the hill. Our dog let the boys know they were on his turf, the boys didn't pay any attention to him, the boys climbed up on a stump to look out over the river. I told the boys there could be pitch on the stump, which got their attention about as well as the dog had. I went back to kicking junk around in the garage, when from up on the hill I heard "Hey Mister, how far is it to the Astor Column?" I said about a mile then pointed them to a trail through the woods the kids of the area had built in past years. As the boys went into the woods, I told them not to get lost. As a parent, we show trails to the young and give them warnings and direction.

It is my hope that the young and we the young at heart gain some strength, with our faith in God, because of the passing of Brad and Scotty this month.

2-1-91

A heartfelt thanks,
George Baker

Friday service to honor five victims

WARRENTON — A Friday memorial service for five Warrenton High School students who died last week will be open to the public, said a spokesman for the group organizing the service.

The half-hour service, sponsored by the Warrenton Ministerial Association, will begin at 2:15 p.m. in the high school gymnasium, said Rev. Dan Mickelson, pastor of The Philadelphia Church in Hammond. Mickelson is a member of the association, a group of church pastors in the Warrenton-Hammond area.

The five students were among six teen-agers killed last Friday in an automobile accident near the Fort Clatsop Road intersection of state Highway 105, also known as Alternate U.S. Highway 101. The five were Timothy W. Morgan, Jason Christopher Hurl, Darren E. Godwin, Cory Bingaman-Storey and Kenneth Mahialani Goin.

Mickelson said the service would begin with an invocation by the Rev. George Spencer, pastor of the Warrenton Church of the Nazarene.

The Warrenton High School Choir will then perform, followed by a student reading of a written tribute.

Mickelson said the choir performance and the written tribute were included as a "vital expression" from the student body after the tragic loss.

The service will continue with a song presentation by Ginger and Lisa Bowman, students at Lewis and Clark Christian Academy of Astoria. The memorial message will then be given by Doug Marshall, pastor of the Warrenton Church of Christ.

After the message there will be a moment o silence in memory of the students, followed by a closing prayer from the Rev. Ed Bussert, pastor of First Baptist Church of Warrenton.

Afterward, the pastors will be available to provide counseling to any who desire it, Mickelson said.

He said gifts of flowers would be acceptable for the service, or remembrances may be made to assist the victims' families. Such gifts can be made to a memorial fund, in care of the high school, for which cards will be available at the service. A separate memorial fund was established this week at the Bank of Astoria's Marine Drive Branch by a local business.

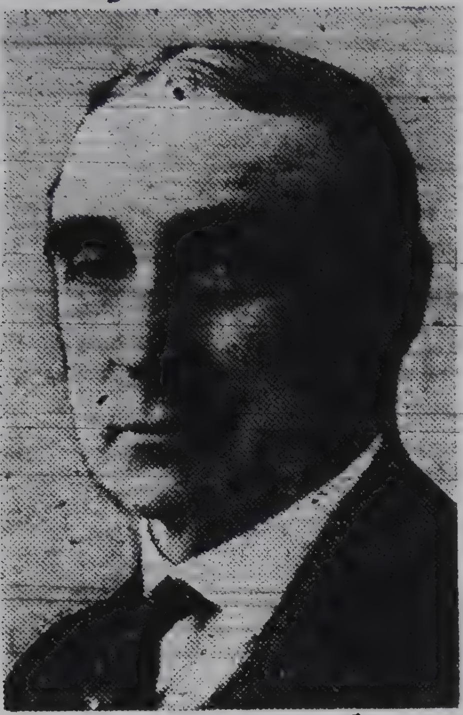
Clinton Passes



Death today removed one of Clatsop county's oldest residents and the dean of all county officials in Oregon---County Clerk J. C. Clinton, who had held that office 38 years.

Death Closes Long Career, J. C. Clinton

Death in today's early morning hours abruptly ended the 38-year career of Clatsop county's clerk: John Couch Clinton, 76, who was found dead in his Elks club lodgings about 9 a. m. by Ross Clinton, his brother.

The venerable clerk had been ill intermittently for the last several weeks, although he missed little work and spoke only of not feeling well. Today, when he failed to appear at work, he was discovered in bed in his room at the Elk's club, where he has lived for 17 years.

Clinton's death removes from the official scene the dean of Oregon's public servants. And his passage closes the book on the most remarkable sustained record of public service in the history of Clatsop county.

First Held Public Job in 1894

Clinton was appointed deputy sheriff here in 1894 by Sheriff Jim Hare. Two years later, in 1896, the county court adopted Hare's recommendation that Clinton be named both deputy sheriff and jailer. In 1900 Clinton was named deputy county clerk and recorder on the recommendation of Clerk H. J. Wherity. Two years later Clinton successfully ran for clerk for the first time, beating B. J. Sloop by 1278 votes; and he served without interruption from 1902 until death came today, turning back all challengers for his public office by his sheer ability and remarkable attention to the duties of his office.

Clinton was born in Astoria September 6, 1864, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Clinton, an Astoria heavy-construction contractor. He grew up in the early hurly-burly of the town and as a young man, worked for a time on his father's piledriver as a pile buck. For a time he operated a soda fountain and candy store, one of the first in Astoria, which after a series of mutations during a half-decade eventually became what is today Lawson's

Had Statewide Reputation

During Clinton's unprecedented term in public office he obtained the statewide reputation as a leading authority on details and duties of the office of county clerk. His opinion on legal matters relating to recording of instruments and papers, such as wills, deeds, mortgages and the myriad of other legal documents pouring through the clerk's hands, was sought and accepted frequently, both by local and outside attorneys at law.

He is described here by his longtime friends as having been among the most charitable of men. He lived a somewhat lonely life, after a marriage which was dissolved many years ago. But his energies and interests were thrown into his work and he often labored well into the night, after office hours.

He became known for his meticulous attention to detail. Abstrators coming here from other counties praised Clinton's system in operating the clerk's office, declaring it to be exemplary in the entire state.

Recalled Early Campaigns

During all these years' Clinton

More About

periodically "campaigned" briefly during each election time. He liked to tell about the "early days" when a campaign was a campaign and it meant hours of nudging a team of horses through the mud roads to reach the voters in Clatsop's far reaches. For a brief interlude of electioneering at Seaside or south, for instance, Cilnton took the boat from Astoria to Skipanon and plowed south by horse-team and buggy to Seaside, or to Mishakawa.

Clinton probably knew more people and was better known by more people in this county than any man who ever lived here. He regularly attended meetings of the former Astorians, held in Portland. And he knew them all, as they knew him. The trips were among the few of this solitary man's social diversions, especially in later years.

Had Remarkable Memory

Clinton had a remarkable memory for names and places and events. He ocuid recall what took place and the year, back into the 19th century—be it a fight, a marriage, a death or merely a sketch of early Astoria lore. And he held forth like a patriarch in the county clerk's office, ready and willing to take on all comers in a razzing match, providing it did not conflict with the dispatch of his duties. He ran the office of county clerk with an iron hand, closely observing all the laws and applying the rules and regulations with the sternness of a high tribunal to all who used the county's official records.

Clinton is survived by two brothers, Ross Clinton of Seaside and De Witt Clinton of Portland; a sister, Sadie H. Clinton of Portland, and two nephews, James Wallace of Astoria and Couch Martin Wallace of Portland.

Was Honored In Portland

He was about to start his 39th year as county clerk, his 47th year as a Clatsop public official this January. In Portland last month, he was heralded as the dean of Oregon's county clerks at a meeting there of the state's county clerks' association. The public recognition was among the few such tributes even formally paid the venerable servant. Oldtimers here recall he was never forward or aggressive as a politician; and although he had been a republican party member all his life, he accepted politics philosophically, building his strength on his unusual record rather than aggressively seeking pure political support.

The county court has been informed that the law requires the court to appoint a successor to Clinton, the appointee to serve until the next general election, which will be in November, 1942. Commissioners John Slotte and James Elliott said today they would make the appointment today, an emergency move made necessary by demands of the office. County Judge Guy Boyington was out of the city today.

Chinook charter captain dies

A Chinook, Wash., charter boat skipper died after suffering an apparent heart attack on the Columbia River near Chinook Sunday. Bill Coon, 62, was dead by the time rescue crews arrived, according to U.S. Coast Guard reports.

Coon was piloting the 40-foot charter boat, the Gabilan, out of the marina at Chinook around 1:30 Sunday afternoon when he apparently suffered a heart attack. One of the six other people aboard got on the boat's radio and called for help, according to Group Duty Officer Steve Sandoval. The Gabilan returned to the marina.

A Coast Guard helicopter was dispatched to the scene and Coast Guard officials asked an ambulance to meet them at the marina. The helicopter lowered an emergency medical technician to the marina, Sandoval said, but Coon was dead at the scene. Coon had owned the boat for roughly 25 years, according to local charter operators.

Burned boy 'critical'

A 17-year-old honor student set himself on fire outside his Astoria home early this morning.

The teen, a senior at Astoria High School, was in critical condition at Legacy Emanuel Hospital with burns over 80 percent of his body, a hospital spokeswoman said. Astoria police said the boy told them he was trying to commit suicide.

A neighbor, awakened at 12:57 a.m. by the boy's screams, found him on fire in the street in the 800 block of Alameda Avenue and doused the flames. Police officers found a gas can sitting on the ground near the boy. Officers said the boy repeatedly told them, "Let me die, let me die."

Before setting himself on fire, the boy apparently had tried to electrocute himself and had slashed his wrists, police said. He also might have ingested or injected eye contact solution.

The boy's mother was asleep and unaware of his suicide attempt until she was awakened by police officers searching the house. Police said she was distraught.

A Medix ambulance crew took the boy to Columbia Memorial Hospital. Life Flight helicopter flew him to the burn unit at Legacy Emanuel Hospital in Portland. A Medix spokeswoman said the boy had second- and third-degree burns.

Astoria High administrators were calling in extra counselors and setting up "safe rooms" this morning to help students and teachers cope. Principal Steve Giere said administrators and teachers met to develop a response plan after police informed them before classes.

Retired school counselor Fyllis Lobe described the boy as "bright." Police found academic awards and college applications in his bedroom.

Teen still in critical

By JILL CARNELL and
ANDREA KENNET
Of The Daily Astorian

An Astoria teen remained in critical condition this morning in a Portland hospital, while the community struggled to understand why the high school honor student set himself on fire.

Andrew Sean Crichton, 17, an Astoria High School senior, suffered third-degree burns over 80 percent of his body in an attempted suicide at his 859 Alameda Ave. home early Friday morning. He apparently doused himself in gasoline and ignited it, Astoria police said. A neighbor was awakened by the boy's screams shortly before 1 a.m., found Andrew on fire in the street and quenched the flames. Police found a gas can nearby.

Before setting himself on fire, Crichton apparently tried to electrocute himself and had slashed his wrists, police said. He also might have ingested or injected eye contact solution.

INSIDE:
☐ Local groups talk about teens and suicide
☐ Warning signs....... 16

No one close the boy had any indication that he was contemplating suicide, said Astoria police Acting Sgt. Jim Crabtree. Crichton had taken $2,200 out of his savings account a few days earlier to buy a kayak. Police found the money in his bedroom.

School officials, friends and his employer described Andrew as upbeat, bright and pleasant, someone they could always count on.

"He's a wonderful kid," said Jill Storey, owner of the Astoria Dairy Queen restaurant where Crichton has worked since September 1996. He's one of her best workers, and was always willing to work extra hours, she said. Unlike most of the other teen-age workers, he liked to join his bosses for meals.

He had worked Wednesday night. "He was just good ol' Andrew," Storey said.

The restaurant, located next to the high school, employs many students. Storey said she was encouraging them to talk out their feelings. Some of the kids weren't able to work, but others took over Crichton's shifts Friday night and over the weekend.

"The kids were just so upset. We're all wanting to know why. We have lots of questions that are unanswered. We are saying lots of prayers for Andrew and his family," she said.

Andrew Crichton

The boy is Legacy Emanual Hospital's burn unit. Crichton's mother, Helen, reported that he had improved slightly over the weekend, Storey said. His kidneys were functioning Saturday.

Storey has put up a poster at the restaurant for students, his friends and others to sign.

Crichton was nicknamed "Fudge" for the "Superfudge" children's book series that had been his favorite as a child, Storey said.

Lisa Bjork, an Astoria High junior, said this morning that she'd been in the band with Crichton for three years, but she didn't know him very well. "Not a lot of people knew him. He kept to himself," she said.

Crichton has been a member of the Viking Nordic Dancers, a local Scandinavian dance group, for several years. Bonnie Ladd, who runs the group, described Crichton as "a really nice kid who never ever caused any trouble." She said he helps out whenever he needed. "He's just a sweetheart, really."

Nettie Blair, a family friend, said he is "bright, outgoing and friendly, a very pleasant young man." Blair said she has known Crichton's mother for years and met him through Scandinavian association activities.

The mood at Astoria High was "hushed" Friday, officials said. The school called in extra counselors and substitute teachers Friday to help students and teachers cope. Counselors expected to assist more students today.

Staff were as upset as students, said Dave Pollard, director of guidance. Crichton's mother is a substitute teacher and has worked in the Astoria School District.

"There was an outpouring of compassion and concern for Fudge and his family," Pollard said.

Many students and staff have come to counselors for support, counselor Marilyn Knowlson said. A lot of them just needed to talk out their emotions.

"In the process of telling one's story, a person begins to manage the very extreme feelings that are stirred by such a tragic event," Knowlson said.

High school boy dies

An Astoria teen who set himself on fire 11 days ago died Sunday night at a Portland hospital. Andrew Sean Crichton's death left a community bewildered why the high school honor student wanted to die.

Crichton, 17, an Astoria High School senior, died at 10:15 p.m. in Legacy Emanuel Hospital's burn center. The boy died of cardiac arrest, said Astoria High Principal Steve Giere.

Crichton suffered third-degree burns over 80 percent of his body when he doused himself in gasoline and lit himself on fire the night of Jan. 7 outside his 859 Alameda Ave. home. A neighbor who heard his screams put out the fire but Crichton was severely burned on his face, back, chest and limbs.

Before setting himself on fire, the boy had slashed his wrists and apparently tried to electrocute and poison himself, Astoria police said.

Astoria High, although scheduled to be closed today for the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday, will be open this afternoon to provide counseling for students. Counselors will be at the school from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

"We need to be ready to respond," Giere said. "The students are going to be asking, 'Why in the world would anyone want to do that?'"

Students were shocked last week by the dramatic suicide attempt, Giere said. About 20 students, some of them Andrew's friends, needed direct individual or group counseling throughout the week.

High school teachers were being notified of Andrew's death by telephone this morning. Giere said school officials plan to continue the crisis-response program when school begins tomorrow, calling in extra counselors, opening a "safe room" where students and staff members can talk about their emotions and providing substitutes for teachers who need a break. Students, he said, will probably still be upset over Andrew's death. "They will come to school with that baggage," he said.

Andrew is survived by his mother, Helen, a substitute teacher, and an older brother, Matthew. His father died when he was young.

Andrew was known among friends and teachers as "Fudge," a nickname that had grown out of his affection for the "Superfudge" series of children's books by Judy Blume.

Andrew, an honor student, had worked at Astoria Dairy Queen since 1996. Owner Jill Storey, who said Andrew was one of her best drive-up window workers, plans to open a fund at Bank of America's Astoria branch to help the Crichton family with his medical and funeral expenses.

Storey had put up a poster at the restaurant for students, friends and others to sign last week.

Storey had spoken Friday to Andrew's mother, who said he wasn't doing well. He had developed pneumonia and an infection. He had undergone skin graft surgery on his back and front, but his head was too swollen for surgery. Firefighters said he was on life support.

Storey, like others in the community who knew Andrew, grappled with trying to understand his suicide. He had worked at Dairy Queen the night before and was upbeat and happy as usual. She said his mother has since told her that Andrew said he didn't like school or Astoria but liked his job.

"He was always on top of the world when he was here," Storey said. "I wish we had known more."

Andrew's is the second recent fire-related death of a teen-age employee at Dairy Queen. Brian "Bob" Patterson-McDowell, 16, was killed in a house fire July 30, 1997. Both had worked the night before.

"Two good guys," Storey lamented.

The Astoria Dairy Queen remains open today. Storey expected many kids would once again gather at the restaurant to talk, especially since school is closed. "I know the kids will come in, sit at tables and talk," she said.

Storey can't equate the grinning Andrew captured in two photographs snapped at the restaurant's employee Christmas party in December with the boy who set himself on fire.

"You look at those two photographs of him smiling. He's happy. You don't understand. I guess nobody will but God."

Miss 'Biz' Chisholm touched lives of her students

Feb 21 1997

My dad just called me to tell me bad news – Miss "Biz" Chisholm, my first grade teacher, passed away. My heart is broken.

Even though I had her as a teacher 34 years ago, I will never forget her. I'll never forget that she told us then, when we were in the first grade, that she was 100 years old. I'll never forget her light blue dress, that she told us was made of crepe paper. But, most of all, I'll never forget how much she loved and cared about us, not only when we were in the first grade, but forever.

I'm thankful that I had Miss Chisholm as a teacher. She is one of the main reasons that I became a teacher – I want to touch lives like she touched mine.

How many people who are reading this letter had Miss Chisholm as a teacher? How many lives have been touched by her goodness and caring? I would guess there are hundreds! Today I celebrate Miss Chisholm and the difference she made in my life. I hope others do, too!

In this time of budget cuts, financial problems, and even strikes, be thankful and celebrate the teachers who care so much about kids. Understand that like Miss "Biz" Chisholm, we go to school everyday for one reason – the kids.

Miss Chisholm, I love you and I will never forget you. I can only hope that I will touch my students like you touched me. Thank you so much for being such a positive influence in my life. If even one student admires me like I admire you, then I have succeeded.

Mrs. Emma Eberman, widow of the late N. A. Eberman, and a Clatsop county pioneer of 1843, died at the home of her son R. L. Eberman in Seaside at 12:30 this morning, after a long illness with a complication of diseases, incident to old age. She was conscious, however, to the end and just as she passed away, was able to bid her children, who had gathered at the bedside, a last goodbye. The deceased was born in England on August 29, 1836, and at the time of her death was slightly over 74 years of age. She came to this country with her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. William Hobson when a mere child, came across the plains with them to Oregon in 1842, arriving at The Dalles, the following spring and was the last surviving member of the Hobson family, who made that memorable trip. Mr. Hobson located on a donation land claim near Skipanon, where the family home was maintanied for many years. In 1850, the deceased was married to the late N. A. Eberman, who at that time owned a donation land claim on Clatsop plains and 15 children were born to them. Ten of these, four girls and six boys are now living. Several years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Eberman moved to Seaside, where they spent the balance of their lives. In addition to her children, Mrs. Eberman left quite a number of more distance relatives, a majority of who reside in this vicinity. The funeral will be held at 1 o'clock on Thursday afternoon from the chapel at the old Clatsop cemetery with the interment in the Old Pioneers' plot.

MET AN AWFUL DEATH.

Veteran of the Cayuse War Burned Alive Near Seaside.

Sunday evening N. A. Eberman, an old resident of this county, was burned alive at this home near Seaside. The helpless condition of the unfortunate man makes the affair the sadder. Mr. Eberman, for the past five or six years, had been paralyzed, and he was as helpless as an infant. Sunday evening Mrs. Eberman and her two daughters left the residence to attend church, leaving the old gentleman alone. When they returned the house was in ashes, in which the charred remains of the husband and father were buried.

About 8 o'clock some neighbors by, saw flames issuing from the building, and immediately gave the alarm. As the house is situated some distance from other habitations, it was some time before a rescuing party reached the scene. The party was too late, however, for the fire demon had completed his awful work, and the blackened corpse only was to be seen amongst the ashes.

Of course it will never be known how the conflagration occurred, but every indication points to a lamp explosion. Mr. Eberman was in bed at the time the fire started, and, being unable to help himself, was forced to watch the flames creep up to him. His terrible sufferings can better be imagined than told. Coroner Pohl has taken charge of the remains, but it is not thought an inquest will be held.

Niman A. Eberman was born in Henry county, Tenn., December 9, 1821, and started for Oregon in January, 1843, arriving in October of the same year. He located near Skipanon, where he has since resided. At the outbreak of the Cayuse war he enlisted as a volunteer, and served throughout the hostilities as a scout, acquitting himself with bravery. Early in the '50's he married Miss Emma Hobson, a sister of Hon. John Hobson, ex-collector of customs of this port. He leaves eleven children to mourn his loss. They are: Mrs. Fannie Austin, William, Philo, Richard, Willis, Kate, Burrill, George, Niman, Maude and Nellie Eberman. Mr. Eberman was a member of the Indian War Veteran Society, of this county, under whose auspices the funeral will take place. The interment will occur at 1 o'clock this afternoon from the church on Clatsop Plains, and the remains will be laid to rest in Clatsop Cemetery. The Seaside train will make two trips today for the accommodation of those wishing to attend the services. Friends of the family are invited to attend.

Visitor dies after wreck on bridge

Utah driver was seriously hurt in Dec. 16 accident

A Utah man hurt along with his fiancée and another woman in a collision on the Astoria Bridge Dec. 16 died Wednesday.

John W. Eddins, 68, of Cleveland died about 2:30 p.m. at Legacy Emanuel Hospital in Portland, said Astoria police Capt. Alan Oja. Eddins' fiancée, Sharon Green, 54, of East Carbon, Utah, remains in the same hospital in fair condition. Susan Edith Hill, 47, also of East Carbon, was released from the hospital Dec. 26.

The three were headed south across the bridge when their small Plymouth sedan suddenly veered into the oncoming lane and into an oncoming pickup truck at the start of the curves at the Astoria end. The other driver wasn't hurt.

Police think Eddins, who was driving, had suffered some type of medical problem. He had recently been diagnosed as diabetic and had other health problems, including requiring oxygen assistance, Oja said.

The trio had been visiting relatives in Washington and were on their way back to Utah. Earlier reports inaccurately described their relationships. Hill is a cousin to either Eddins or Green, Oja said, though he didn't know which one.

Previously, the last fatal traffic accident in Astoria occurred in October 1996. Ernie Stenerson, 81, was hit by a car as he tried to cross Marine Drive by McDonald's.
